INTRODUCTION

On May 23, 1986, Public Law 99-319 was signed into law (reauthorized and amended, 1988, 1991), the Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act of 1986. This law was enacted to fund advocacy services to protect and advocate the rights of individuals with mental illness and to investigate incidents of abuse, neglect, and rights violations. The PAIMI Program has authority under this law to:

1. Investigate incidents or suspected situations of abuse and neglect in facilities that provide care or treatment.

2. Access facilities, clients, and their records.

3. Pursue administrative, legal, and other appropriate remedies to ensure protection of individuals with mental illness.

Under this law, "abuse" is defined as an act or omission of an employee of a facility providing care or treatment, which was performed or which was failed to be performed knowingly, recklessly, or intentionally, and which caused, or may have caused, injury or death to the individual. This includes the sexual assault of an individual with a mental illness, the striking of an individual, the use of excessive force when placing an individual in restraints, and the use of physical or chemical restraints when not in compliance with State or Federal laws.

"Neglect" is defined as an act or omission by an individual who is responsible for providing care or treatment to the individual which caused or may have caused injury or death to the individual or which placed the individual at risk of injury or death, including the failure to establish or carry out an appropriate treatment plan, or provide a safe environment, or provide adequate nutrition, clothing, or health care.

"Facility" is defined to include, but need not be limited to hospitals, nursing homes, community facilities for individuals with mental illness, board and care homes, homeless shelters, jails and prisons.
